The Graduate School has implemented a scholarly ethics and integrity component in graduate education effective Fall 2013 that applies to graduate students beginning their graduate degree program in Fall 2014 and after. The AOE Department requires all graduate students to attend the AOE Seminar on Guidelines for Graduate Students. The seminar will review the guidelines for graduate students from the Graduate Program Director. This seminar will be used to address current or recent issues related to scholarly ethics and integrity, including examples from the AOE Department and from the larger academic community. Distance learning graduate students have the option of reviewing the presentation slides. By signing this AOE Ethics and Integrity Statement, you verify that you have reviewed the slides in their entirety, understand the content presented, and will abide by such expectations throughout the duration of your graduate degree program.
