

Virginia Tech and Rolls-Royce are developing a unique sensor to continuously monitor engine-ingested particle properties and mass. Through laser scattering and extinction, foreign material such as condensation, dust, and volcanic ash can be quantified for size, shape, and number density to provide accurate diagnostic information. Depicted: A laser scattering and extinction experiment on a water spray for development of an inlet particle mass sensor concept.

Students: Chi Young Moon, Aldo Gargiulo
Laboratory Manager: Jaideep Pandit
P.I.: Todd Lowe, Lin Ma, Gwi Bo Byun