

Virginia Tech leads the way in turbulence modeling and validation through combined computational/experimental research. Depicted: A benchmark flow case centered on unsteady transitional flows led to new eddy-resolving model implementation validated using high resolution, time resolved particle image velocimetry (PIV).

