

Time-Resolved Doppler Global Velocimetry is used to measure high speed jet flows to understand how turbulent behavior contributes to jet noise. The system pictured measures three component velocities at 32 planar points in the flow at a rate of 250 kHz.

Students: Ashley Saltzman
Laboratory Manager: Jaideep Pandit
P.I.'s: Todd Lowe and Wing Ng